“In today’s knowledge economy, intellectual capital is our nation’s greatest and most renewable natural resource.”

Walter G. Be deceives, PhD, President and CEO, AACC

Reclaiming the American Dream: A Report from the 21st-Century Commission on the Future of Community Colleges, commissioned in 2012 by the American Association of Community Colleges (AACC), called for dramatic changes to the community college system to help meet 21st-century educational and employment needs and ensure America’s promise of upward mobility for each generation. As a future community college leader, you can play a key role in that critical transformation.

75% of current community college presidents responding to an AACC survey said they expected to retire before 2022—along with thousands of other top administrators from the baby boom generation. To step into one of those significant leadership roles, you will need a wide range of knowledge and skills to navigate a rapidly changing education environment and to reimagine and revitalize the community college of today to meet the needs of tomorrow.

The Doctor of Management (DM) in Community College Policy and Administration from University of Maryland University College (UMUC) can help you be ready.

NOTE: This program is not available to Maryland residents.
Critical transformation. As a future community college leader, you can play a key role in that promise of upward mobility for each generation. What graduates say about our DM program

“The lessons learned have proven invaluable. It is uncanny how often I am able to apply course discussions in solving real-world challenges.”

James H. Henderson, DM; Vice President, Middlesex Community College; Bedford/Lowell, Massachusetts

“I am a better college leader because of this program!”

James Henderson, DM; Vice President, Middlesex Community College; Bedford/Lowell, Massachusetts

“UMUC’s doctoral program gave me the confidence and knowledge to advance, and I was appointed vice president of a community college almost immediately after graduation.”

Paula R. Pitcher, DM; Vice President, Middlesex Community College; Bedford/Lowell, Massachusetts

Follow a dissertation path designed for completion

At UMUC, your success in completing your dissertation is our highest priority. The DM in Community College Policy and Administration is a flexible online program, designed to allow you to incorporate your work and personal commitments into your academic program. You’ll work with a personal advisor to design a dissertation path and select faculty members who can best support your dissertation. By meeting with your advisor weekly, developing a dissertation plan, and submitting your progress, you’ll keep moving forward. Building on previous learning, without interruption, UMUC’s ABD Lane completion process gives you the attention from the faculty, the support of your cohort, and the ongoing encouragement you need to navigate the dissertation process.
